PORT ARTHUR

Has Fallen--Stoessel Held Out Until First Day Of the Year.

Long Contest in the Siege a Story Of Almost Unceasing Slaughter.

VALOR ON BOTH SIDES.

Washington, Jan. 4. With Port Arthur's fall the most dramatic of modern warfare has been written into history.

The capitulation marks the end of the most remarkable struggle for possession of a fortress in recent times, and the cessation of a slaughter which has cost many thousands of lives. The full effect of the surrender remains to be seen.

For 327 days the Gibraltar of the East has been beleaguered on land and sea by the combined forces of the mikado. From the guns of Admiral Togo's fleet and the batteries of General Nogi's army has poured an almost ceaseless hail of shell and shrapnel on the citadel of the ear. Night and day the little brown soldiers of the mikado hurled themselves against the battlements, gaining slowly but surely in their advance on the chain of seemingly impregnable defenses. Fighting over every inch of contested ground, scoring all proposals for a surrender, General Stoessel finally was compelled to yield to the inevitable.

World Gives Praise.

The world has already accorded its meed of praise to the besiegers and the besieged. The dogged determination of General Stoessel to resist to the last has made him the hero of the Russian army, while the ceaseless activity of Admiral Togo and General Nogi has gained them recognition as two of the most accomplished warriors of modern times. The feats of valor performed on both sides have been without parallel since the history of the art of warfare was reduced to a science.

Port Arthur became an invested city almost from the time of the firing of the first shot in the Russo-Japanese war, on the night of Feb. 8, 1904, when Admiral Togo made his dash and sent his torpedo boats into the harbor and attacked the Russian fleet while its officers were making merry on shore.

Two Russian battleships and two cruisers, the flower of the fleet, and several smaller vessels, were badly damaged in that attack, and when daylight came the Japanese fleet began hurling shells into the city. Then was the beginning of the eleven months of horror—the conversion of the fortress into what has been repeatedly described as a "living hell."

Assault Lasts Five Days.

For five days without ceasing the final assault was maintained. Day and night the Japanese artillery continued to fire, and assault followed assault in unending succession, and the place was surrounded with an increasing hail of fire.

At 6 in the evening of Dec. 31 an assault on the whole eastern side was renewed with amazing vehemence. A mine made a hole in the side of "H" Fort and the Japanese Infantry piercing the covered way rushed in. Fighting lasted all night, the Japanese pushing against the whole ridge simultaneously. The Russians resisted at every point, but were slowly driven back.

The position was now desperate. Great explosions around the fort proclaimed that the Russians were exploding their magazines. Flames and smoke in the harbor, followed by explosion after explosion, revealed the destruction of the Russian battleships. They destroyed rather than surrendered them. They also apparently purposely blew up two of their own forts.

Big War Ships Destroyed.

The Sevastopol was blown up and other large Russian ships were destroyed as thoroughly as possible. The Retvizan, the Poltava and the Pallada caught fire and the other ships were blown up inside and near the entrance of the harbor.

At half an hour after midnight on January 2 the Russians evacuated the East Kinwanshan fort and the Japanese occupied N and M heights, to the south of the fort. At 12:30 noon, Monday, Tanjakewanshan and "M" forts were blown up by the Russians.

Then came word that General Stoessel had offered to surrender and fighting ceased.

Conditions Liberal.

General Stoessel, most stubborn in carrying out the will of his sovereign, has seen the advance of the besieging army and in momentum and energy until to hold out longer would have been a crime against humanity. The conditions of the surrender are not yet known, but advice received at the Japanese legation say Gen. Nogi accepted the terms proposed by Gen. Stoessel.

SEVERAL CASES

Of Smallpox Have Developed Near Antioch.

Several new cases of smallpox have developed in North Christian from a violation of the law by a young man, who attended a party with the disease. At least five young men who were there now have smallpox, and several of them have already been removed to the Cedar Grove hospital. The Health Officer has encountered much opposition to the vaccination orders and the fresh outbreak is due to the refusal of the people in the Antioch neighborhood to be vaccinated.

The negroes at the Concord hospital have nearly all been sent to their homes and the trouble this time is among the white people.

CLOTHES BURNED OFF.

Little Child Narrowly Escapes Horrible Death.

The little four-year-old child of Mr. Thomas Wilson, who lives on Cleveland avenue, narrowly escaped a horrible death yesterday morning. The child was standing near an open grate, when its clothes caught on fire, and the outer garments were entirely consumed by the flames. Mrs. Wilson, who was attracted by the child's screams, succeeded in smothering the flames. The little one's hair was scorched, but beyond this it was not injured.

ARNOLD OF THE RANKS.

BY AMELIA FREY.

The west was a flaming sea. A few heavy clouds hung suspended like gilded craft—fantastic, motionless. Altwart the entrained brilliancy beyond a prairie grouse winged its solitary way.

The somber lines of Fort McLane changed to scintillating splendor. The whole world around flamed with the crimson and gold of sunset.

Just within the stockade gate stood Lieut. Chantrell intently scanning the horizon with a field glass. A scarcely discernible speck near the sky-line rose and fell with rhythmic motion. Slowly it evolved itself into a horse and rider—the loping swing of a horse, the rider lying low on the animal's neck.

The man in uniform adjusted his binocular for a nearer view. "By Jove!" he ejaculated, softly. "I wonder what—Hello!"

The approaching horseman displayed the regulation service uniform, with a blood-stained rag around his head. His identity and appearance established beyond a doubt that some important issue was at stake, hinting at desperate chances many men were taking somewhere out in that illimitable greatness of God's country.

For weeks past disquieting rumors had reached the fort. The Sioux tribes were quietly mustering their forces for the warpath. When the chieftains gave the signal, the flower of their nation, 10,000 braves, incited to an almost fanatical frenzy by nightly war dances, would descend upon the sparsely settled districts.

The light was fast fading in the west as the trooper pulled up at the gate, and swung heavily from his badly-heaving horse.

"I must see Col. Aldridge at once," he panted, in a hoarse tone. To Lieut. Chantrell, his face gleaming gray as his alkali-dusted uniform. "There's the dust to pass along the Little Snake. Maj. Dunn's command is surrounded two miles north of Big Rock ford by a bunch of bucks under Painted Horse. The boys are fighting the fight of their lives, but God help them after the sun rises to-morrow."

Maj. Dunn, commanding a detachment of regulars, had attempted to form a junction with troops stationed at Fort Dalles. He had been intercepted by a war party of Sioux near the Little Snake, and forced to entrench himself in a depression near the river bank. That same night two volunteers had attempted to break through the cordon surrounding them. One succeeded with a bullet wound in the head; the other suffered the death of a hero, covering his companion's retreat.

The Sioux had taken to the war path! Almost instantly the fort blazed into sudden activity. The Third battalion received orders to prepare for service. Every man knew what it meant—a long, hard ride, with a good stiff fight at the end of it. The parade soon became a congested mass of moving man and beast.

Col. Aldridge was pacing impatiently up and down his quarters. Suddenly he turned to an orderly. "Have Capt. Machamer report at once."

A moment later the officer saluted.

"Have you a man in your command," asked Col. Aldridge, tersely, "who is not afraid of death?"

"My men are American soldiers, sir," came the quick response. "You understand me. On the field of battle every soldier takes his chances. Have you a man who is willing to accept one chance out of a hundred? It is a dangerous mission—he must go only as a volunteer."

"I can name a number, sir." "But one in whom you have the strictest confidence, who will not fail at the crucial moment. He must reach those beleaguered men by daybreak. The relief can not possibly arrive there until two hours later. Those two hours may mean a matter of life and death. He shall have the fastest horse of the garrison, and must not fail." Maj. Dunn if he understood. Have Arnold and his way to the battle was that.

Arnold had just finished tightening his saddle-girths when he was arrested by a sergeant and taken to the colonel at headquarters.

As the young trooper turned toward "Officers' Row," the captain gazed after the manly, stalwart figure with a certain feeling of regret.

"It's a shame to sacrifice him on such a mission," he muttered, angrily. "Bob's as brave as they make 'em, and he's one of the boys' heart and soul. The chances are he's going to his death. And there's the 'Belle of Old McLane'."

The "Belle of Old McLane" was surely a most important factor. Three years before Bob Arnold had been a sophomore at an eastern college and the idolized leader of his class. One day came news of a serious financial difficulty that involved his father's fortune.

It left but one alternative open to him—to leave college and abandon all hopes of a future professional career. It was a sad blow to his ambition—a renunciation of all that appealed to him in life—but not once did he falter in his decision. He left for the west with the God-speed of his college-mates ringing in his ears, and eventually joined the army. About the same time his company was transferred to Fort McLane. Col. Aldridge was placed in command of the garrison. He was a veteran in the civil war and an able officer; but, best in the eyes of Arnold, he was the father of Dorothy.

The "Belle of Old McLane" the boys affectionately described her, and went to him who denied her deference. She was the prettiest girl of prairie-land, as demure and dainty as a western bluebell, and many an officer's heart beat faster at sight of her. But it soon became evident to all that she favored one—Arnold of the ranks.

One summer night under the mystic spell of the harvest-moon he confessed his love for her. It was the old, old story, ever new, for the woman he loved loved him. Both realized that until promotion came to him their cause was hopeless. But they were young, and youth is ever hopeful.

The steel-gray eyes of Col. Aldridge regarded him searchingly as he apprised him of the desperate chances that the commission would involve.

"I do not consider it your duty to accept," finished the colonel, in the cold, even tones of the old-school warrior. "You may choose as you will. If you return, your promotion is assured."

"I am ready, sir," answered Arnold, briefly.

The moon was already risen as he led his restless pony to the gate. She was the fleetest of the corral, with the blood of five generations of Indian racers in her veins. He had not mounted. A lover's intuition told him some one would be waiting. Love seldom errs.

A woman came to him from out of the shadow with a sob on her lips. "Don't go, Bob," she entreated, passionately. "The men say you'll never get through alive. Say that you'll not go, Bob. To think of you out there alone on the prairie, wounded, dead perhaps—ah, God, God!—think—think what it means to a woman!"

"Would you have the garrison think me a coward, Dorothy?" he questioned, tenderly. "Ah, no, you wouldn't, little girl. And when I come back, were going to be happy, you and I. This will mean promotion for me, sweetheart," he added gayly, "and it's Mrs. Arnold I'll be kissing soon."

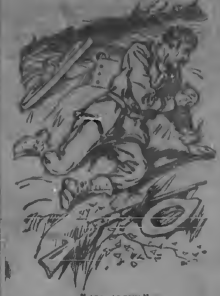

"But Bob—suppose—"

"You mustn't think of that, sweetheart, for if you do it will surely bring bad dreams."

"I shall not sleep to-night. I shall only think of you, Bob—out there alone."

He kissed her, and was gone. All night long his pony pounded the floor of the prairie with unflagging hoofbeats. On, on, with the moon-shadow of a horse and rider behind and the face of a woman taking shape ahead—a woman dearer than life to him. On, on, with the silent rush of the night wind past his ears, hissing of death in the distance. Twice he rested his pony, for the pace was beyond endurance. As the dull gray streaks of the morning

FIRST LOOSE SALE

Of Season Held Tuesday— Good Prices Prevailed.

The first sale of loose tobacco on the floor in Hopkinsville this season was held Tuesday by R. M. Woodbridge & Co. The recent "season" for handling was a very poor one and the weed is in high order and out of good condition for the market. Prices, however, for that sold, were quite satisfactory all around.
About thirty thousand pounds were offered. Prices ranged as follows: Trash, $2.50 to $3.25; light, $3.50 to $4.50; common leaf, $5 to $6; medium leaf, $6 to $7. No good leaf was offered. The next sale will be held Tuesday, Jan. 10.

The report of the board of inspectors shows that there have been no signs of the new crop as yet. Considerable old tobacco has recently changed hands, however. These sales were all private. Hoghead receipts are still small, but will improve as soon as the weed comes in proper order for handling.

BANQUET AHEAD AT THE LATHAM FOR THE CLUB.

Col. Bob Woodbridge Elected President by a Wonderful Landslide.

CHAMP VICE PRESIDENT

The Cotton Question Comes
Up For An Interesting Discussion.

proceeded unattended to the platform and called the Baldheaded Club to order Saturday night.

The jovial President had been absent a meeting or two, kept away by circumstances over which he had no control, and there were many expressions of delight that he was back in his old place.

Vice President Bob Woodbridge alone seemed to be rather disappointed, since he was deprived of the honor and pleasure of presiding in the absence of the President.

President Twyman said it gratified him greatly to be present again.
"I see," said he, "that the associated press calls attention to the fact that President Roosevelt the other day surprised all Washington by boiling walking down Pennsylvania avenue absolutely unattended.

I have just performed the same strenuous feat here in Hopkinsville, and have seen the president and gone him one better. I came down Main street by myself, making the entire trip at night. Today may be a brave and daring President, but there are other pebbles on the beach."

Col. John Phelps arose to remark that the courageous exploit of President Twyman deserved the highest commendation of every admirer of dauntless valor.

A recently married member appeared at this juncture for the first time since his honeymoon began, and was welcomed to a seat beside the President. He whispered to President Twyman that he might have to leave before the meeting adjourned, as his furlough expired at 1.30 a. m.
Col. Geo. Hantle, chief of the city fire department, who generally keeps track of what is going on in fire circles, came in with a midnight edition of the Kentuckian in his hand and asked to be permitted to impart some information. Leaving being given, he said: "I note that in a large number of Southern cities, the farmers have resorted to heroic measures to stop the decline in the price of cotton. In order to reduce the distributable supply, they are having cottonburnings, not a pro rata basis.

This is done with as much formality and ceremony as is usually observed when they burn a negro. I believe the year is so busy at least 2,000,000 bales."

This brought out a number of suggestions and expressions of opinion and for several minutes the regular order of business had to give way to the discussion.

Col. Ed Buchanan said the change in the method of lynching negroes had greatly reduced the demand for cotton rope and he believed the lynchers, in making light work for themselves by burning the lynchess, had made a mistake.

Col. Lem McKee said the burning of cotton would not help matters.
There were now so many dry states in the South, that nearly everybody was spitting cotton and the supply was of course abnormal. He said a liquid treatment would, in his opinion, come nearer reaching the root of the trouble.

Col. Bill Bamberger said it looked to him like it would be a better policy to save the cotton without burning it. The same ends could be reached by not growing any cotton for a year or two. Everybody could quit work, take a year off and have a nice, easy time.

Col. Ed Blakemore said Col. Bam-berger had a wonderful head on his shoulders. His idea was positively brilliant. He moved that it be adopted, and there was not a vote against the motion. Col. Bamberger sent a telegram to each Southern State: "Don't burn your cotton. A bale in the barn is worth two in the bush. By order of the B. C."

The hour for the election of officers having arrived, President Twyman called for nominations.

Before any one else could secure the floor, Col. Bob Woodbridge sprang to his feet and made the following impassioned appeal:

"Colonels of the Baldheaded Club, lend me your ears. I will return them in good order. I have been beaten for President so often and compelled to take a secondary place, that my ambition will brook no further delay. I am bound to have this office and I want it by unanimous vote. If you will just please elect me this one time, I will set up a banquet to the whole club at Hotel Latham and agree to either marry, or make one of my brothers marry, before this time next year and invite the whole club to the wedding feast.
If these inducements are not enough, I will go still further and promise to read an original poem at every meeting."

Before he could proceed further, Col. Lloyd Whitlow was on his feet, leading a stampede to the Baldheaded Child of Destiny and he was swept into the office on a tidal wave of enthusiasm. No formal vote was ever taken. Before the President could ask for further nominations, Cols. Ira L. Smith, T. M. Jones and M. D. Brown seized Col. Woodbridge and carried him on their shoulders to the President's stand.

"Go it, Bob," yelled Col. J. W.
Downer, "With the Smiths, Joneses and Browns for you, the world can't beat you."

After the excitement subsided and Col. Woodbridge had expressed his thanks, the President

Twyman appointed a committee consisting of Cols. Lem McKee, J. O.
Chopper and Buck Leavell to assist the President-elect in arranging for the coming banquet.

Col. Green Champlin said he thought it would be a good idea to invite Chanucy M. Depew and other baldheaded men from a distance to respond to toasts, but Col. Woodbridge said this was unnecessary, as the club had plenty of local talent and he was in favor of having home speakers.

His wishes will be acceded to and a strong list of speakers assigned to a variety of subjects. Cols. John Phelps, W. R. Howell, Green Champlin, W. L. Bamberger, Henry Clay Smith and other fine speakers will be on the program.

Champlin was elected Vice President and the club adjourned before he had a chance to kick.

VAN CLEVE-BAKER.

Receptions Follow the Wedding on Tuesday and Wednesday Evening.

One of the prettiest weddings ever solemnized in the county, took place near Julien Tuesday, January 3, at Oak Hall Farm, the home of Mrs.
Julia Stowe Baker.

Miss Marie Elsie Baker and Mr.
Thomas Corbin Van Cleve were the principals.

The beautiful parlors were tastefully decorated with ferns, evergreens and flowers, while here and there were bunches of mistletoe.
The bridal party entered the parlors preceded by two little flower girls.
There were six couples of attendants. The young gentlemen were Messrs. Aubrey Tuggle and Dan Owley, of Hopkinsville; Emmet Jones and Harry Gaines, of Newstead; Frank Baker, of St. Louis, and Frank Caudle, of Julien.

The young ladies were Misses Ermine Van Cleve, sister of the groom; Polly Graves, Murray, Ky.; Irma Goodwin, Cerulean Springs; Alberta Baker and Carrie Baker, sisters of the bride, and Annie Stowe, of Church Hill.

The ceremony was pronounced by Rev. J. A. Kirtley, pastor of South Union Baptist church, in an appropriate and impressive style.

A large number of the friends of the young couple were present and extended cordial congratulations.

The bridal presents were numerous and elegant and were greatly admired.

The bridal party drove in buggies from Julien to Mr. J. J. Van Cleve's, near this city, where at night an elegant reception was given by the parents of the groom. This was also largely attended.

Last night another reception was tendered them by Mr. and Mrs. R.
T. Stowe, of Newstead.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Cleve will remain a few days at Mrs. Baker's and then go to Cadiz the first of next week to make their home.

Mr. VanCleve is engaged in the hardware business and is a young business man of fine promise. He is a son of Mr. J. J. VanCleve, one of the county's leading citizens, and until a short while ago was with A.
J. Meador, the hardware merchant here.

His bride is not only quite pretty, but she is in many ways a most attractive young lady. She was educated at Bethel College in this city and her graces of mind are equal to her personal charms.

The fortunate groom is indeed to be congratulated upon winning such a prize.

HATHAWAY HANGED.

Negro Executed at Winchester, Ky., For Murder

John Hathaway, a negro jockey, was hanged at Winchester, Ky., Tuesday for the murder of his sweetheart, on Jan. 4, 1904. The scaffold used was the one on which Earle Whitney and Claude O'Brien were hanged at Lexington last year.
The negro died game.

A VENERABLE PASTOR CURED BY PE-RU-NA

Pe-ru-na is a Catarrhal Tonic Especially Adapted to the Declining Powers of Old Age.

In old age the mucous membrane becomes thickened and partly loses their function.

This leads to partial loss of hearing, smell and taste, as well as digestive disturbances.

Peruna corrects all this by its specific operation on all the mucous membranes of the body.

One bottle will convince anyone. Once used and Peruna becomes a life-long stand-by with old and young.

Strong and Vigorous at the Age of Eighty-eight.

Rev. J. N. Parker, Utica, N. Y., writes:
"In June, 1901, I lost my sense of hearing entirely. My hearing had been somewhat impaired for several years, but not so much affected but that I could hold converse with my friends; but in June, 1901, my sense of hearing left me so that I could hear no sound whatever.
I was also troubled with rheumatic pains in my limbs. I commenced taking Peru-na and now my hearing is restored as good as it was prior to June, 1901. My rheumatic pains are all gone. I cannot speak too highly of Peruna, and now when 88 years old can say it has invigorated my whole system. I cannot but think, dear Doctor, that you must be very thankful to the all loving Father that you have been permitted to live, and by your skill be such a blessing to you have been to suffering humanity." —Rev. J. N. Parker.

A Bishop's Letter.
T. H. Lomax, D. D., Bishop of A. M. E., of Charlotte, N. C., writes: "I recommend your Peruna to all who want a strengthening tonic and an effective remedy for all catarrhal plaints."—T. H. Lomax.
If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peru-na write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

COM. BOOTH-TUCKER

SALVATION ARMY LEADER TO RETURN TO ENGLAND.

Has Had Eighteen Years of Successful Work in the United States—Growth of the Army Under His Efforts.

Commander Booth-Tucker, who for the last 19 years has had charge of Salvation Army work in this country, is to leave the States for England, where he is to take up work of an international character. Doubtless the change to different scenes will be an acceptance one, as the sorrow for his wife and co-worker is yet fresh, it being but a comparatively short time ago Mrs. Booth-Tucker, whilst traveling to the States, was killed in an accident on a railroad.

Booth-Tucker (Frederick St. George de Launoy) was born in India in 1863.
In 1881, after holding several government positions, he resigned to join the Salvation Army. From 1882-91 he had charge of the work in India, and from 1891-96 labored in London in the latter year he came to the United States, and ever since has been Salvation Army commander of this country, his wife, Countess Emma Booth-Tucker, suited her and death having equal authority with her husband in the United States work of the Salvation Army.

In the period spent by the Booth-Tuckers in labors here, a marvellous amount of work has been accomplished, and America should remember with gratitude these zealous workers for social betterment. Though the peril is less appalling in America than Europe, the poor we, too, have always with us, and the Booth-Tuckers here attacked poverty with the weapons that proved adequate. They worked effectively in combating the evils of over-crowding, the many problems dealing with the city poor. Commander Booth-Tucker, in a most excellent monograph on the social relief work of the Salvation Army in the United States, gives a report of the work attempted and accomplished in his late field of labor.

He estimates that in prosperous times the United States has at least 3,000,000 paupers, and that this number is alarmingly increased in seasons of business depression. In dealing with the "submerged" in America, the Army worked on three different lines—shelters for homeless men; shelters for homeless women; homes for girls

COMMANDER BOOTH-TUCKER.

working in stores and offices; homes for children; rescue homes for fallen women; and, in the States, in the night and meetings; slum day nurseries for infants; cheap food depots and central meals; cheap clothing and second-hand stores; salvage brigades for collection of household and office waste; woodyards; employment bureaux; Knights of Hope for prison reformation and ex-criminals; medical relief, including free hospital and dispensaries; summer outings for the poor; penny ice-wagons; Christmas and Thanksgiving dinners; missing friends and inquiry department; farm colonies for the poor. Of a truth, a comprehensive plan of battle.

The shelters for homeless men number about 10, are located in New York, San Francisco, and the large cities lying between these distant points. Ten cents will buy a man a good warm bed for a night, and the cents more give him a room to himself. Hot and cold baths, wash-tubs and reading rooms are free to the lodgers—a contrast to the usual lodging house. There is not such urgent need for similar shelters for women, and but three such have been opened by the army, one in New York, one in San Francisco, and one in Chicago. The homes for artisans not infrequently take in those that found the cheaper shelters a turning-point in their lives, towards reform and a higher standard of living, and in several cities exist Salvation Army homes of this class. The Army has homes for orphan and destitute children in New York and San Francisco, and is making one of its farm colonies an agricultural school, where little ones may learn to become self-supporting and home owners.

Booth-Tucker has brought together "the landless man and the landless land, and his farm-colonies are, perhaps, the most prominent feature of his work in America. In Colorado, California, and Ohio have been established colonies that have attracted large numbers from the city and what is the best part of it, have not them on the land in spite of forebodings that the city's hold was too strong for the one-time dweller therein to remain content with rural life.
Commander Booth-Tucker says of the farm colonies: "There is nothing of a colonial character about them. The colonist is not a mere day laborer without any direct interest in the soil. He is not separated from his family. The links of love are strengthened, instead of being relaxed, and he has placed himself in a position of
